

INTERVIEW – Constructing a Résumé

Each decathlete is asked to construct a résumé that tells about himself/herself. Each decathlete shall bring three copies of the résumé to his/her Interview. The résumé will not be judged. However, the content of the résumé will assist the Interview judges in engaging the decathlete in a successful interview.

A good résumé will go a long way toward helping a decathlete to make a good impression. A bad resume reflects poorly on the candidate. Everyone has something to offer—in writing a résumé, a student should carefully analyze his/her abilities, talents, interests, and activities and stress his/her strong points. First impressions count.

Content and layout of the résumé can vary widely. However, keep the résumé simple and to no more than one page. It has to be read quickly by the judges.

TIPS FOR CONSTRUCTING THE RESUMÈ:

1. Your résumé must be typed. Use a good quality paper. Save your résumé on a computer or CD so that you can change it as needed. This gives you an opportunity to add, or delete, as you think about things you would like to include about yourself.
2. The résumé should be neat. Carelessness and misspelled words are inexcusable. Have some knowledgeable persons proofread your résumé and give you tips for improving it.
3. Some things to think about including in your résumé are extracurricular activities in which you've been engaged in and outside of high school, special interests or hobbies you have, leadership positions you hold or have held, work experience(s), and personal goals.
4. Grades are an important part of "your" picture but not the only part. Note areas of responsibility, recognition or honors that have come your way.
5. A demonstrated social awareness can be in your favor. If you have participated in activities where you were recognized by awards or offices, mention these. Quality leadership is welcome everywhere.

Two sample résumés that follow are different in style, yet each seeks to highlight strong points in a straightforward fashion. Construct your résumé in the style and type that best suits your interests and emphasizes your strengths.
